darling you've gone away

by cock_guzzling_sidon \(orphan_account\).

Summary

Kohga allows himself a moment to grieve.

Sooga would demand he leave and bother with grieving later, or rather ignore the whole thing. Kohga's aware his preference carries danger. Prophecy Man's waiting for him to stumble in his trickery and then he's going to pounce. Leaving bananas carries too much risk. He's reluctantly settled for scattering berries around the grave with its false name carved onto the marker.

Even using his normal form carries too much danger. He's some nameless widow mourning her spouse. No one will bother asking. People are running and mourning on the go; too exhausted to ask whose being grieved.

"I'm going, Sooga."

End Notes

Author absolutely has her day made when she receives commenting/bookmarks/kudos!

Monday was especially... Monday? I could use them.
